WILSON'S BIRTHDAY DEC. 28

CELEBRATED WITH A U. S. SENATE RESOLUTION.

George Creel Speaks at the Luncheon Held in Philadelphia in His Honor.

Ex-President Woodrow Wilson celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday quietly on Thursday of last week, Dec. 28, in his home on S street, Washington, to which during the day came messages of congratulation and felicitation from all parts of the world. A delegation from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation called during the afternoon and informed him that more than $800,000 had been collected and that the $1,000,000 fund for the perpetuation of his ideals was assured. Later in the day a messenger brought an engrossed co py of the Senate resolution congratulating him on his "rapid recovery to good health." It was accompanied by a friendly note from Vice President Coolidge.

The resolution was introduced in the Senate at noon to-day by Senator Harris, of Georgia, who asked unanimous consent for immediate consideration, to which no objection was raised. Most of the Senators were in their seats, including such opponents of the Versailles Treaty as Senators Lodge, Reed of Missouri, Johnson, Brandegee, Moses, France, Poindexter, Norris and La Follette. There was no debate on it and the resolution was adopted without a roll-call with a chorus of "ayes".

Whereas the Senate has heard with great pleasure the announcement of the rapid recovery to good health of former President Hon. Woodrow Wilson: be it

Resolved, That the Vice President be requested to express to Hon. Woodrow Wilson the pleasure and joy of the Senate of the United States because of his rapid recovery to good health.

In presenting his resolution, Senator Harris said:

"From every part of the world, from all classes of people to-day are coming letters and telegrams congratulating Woodrow Wilson on his birthday and his rapid recovery to health. When all of us are forgotten, the name of Woodrow Wilson will be remembered as the greatest of the century."

In transmitting the resolution, the Vice President wrote:

United States Senate,
Washington, D. C., Dec. 28, 1922.

My dear Mr. Wilson:

It gives me great pleasure to be the medium of transmitting the enclosed resolution to you. It was unanimously adopted. To it I wish to add my own felicitations on your recovering good health and my congratulations on the return of another anniversary of your natal day.

With the greetings of the season, I am

Cordially yours,
CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Hon. Woodrow Wilson,
Washington, D. C.

Wilson Foundation Greetings.

A message signed by Franklin D. Roosevelt, as Chairman of the National Committee, was sent to Mr. Wilson. It said:

"Members of permanent board of trustees, executive committee and original organizers of Woodrow Wilson Foundation in assembly here today are happy to be able to advise you that the public's loyal allegiance to those fine ideals and principles for which you stand assures the success of the Foundation. We regard the support given the Foundation by men and women in every State and in all walks of life as a splendid expression of faith in you. The Foundation will live as a permanent tribute of your world services to the cause of human freedom and in this and future generations is destined to render conspicuous public service. Please accept our cordial good wishes for the New Year."

A message from Dr. Charles W Eliot, President-Emeritus of Harvard University, was read and forwarded to Mr. Wilson. The message read:

"To Woodrow Wilson, scholar, statesman and patriot. Many thousands of your fellow-countrymen have united to establish a permanent fund or endowment bearing your name, the income to be used from time to time to promote in future generations meritorious service to public welfare, democracy or peace through justice.

"On Dec. 28, your sixty-sixth birthday, the contributors to this fund, with many other thousands of your countrymen, desire to express to you their admiration and gratitude for your extraordinary services in the cause of human freedom, international co-operation and good-will among men. May you live to see the full fruition of your strenuous and self sacrificing labors.

"CHARLES W. ELIOTT."

George Creel, chief of the Bureau of Public Information, during the War period was the speaker at a luncheon in honor of Wilson's 66th birthday in Philadelphia and among other things said:

He began his address by referring to the great heights to which the Allied nations were lifted at the time of the armistice. "And then," he said, "came 1920, the black, unhappy year that crushed the nation's soul under a dead weight of senseless reactions." But out of the dark hours, he went on, there has come a new light, a "miracle" has ben performed and the people are seeing their way clearly again. Continuing, Mr. Creel said:

They are blind who see only political significance in the November elections of 1922—who view them merely as a shift from one party to another—from Republicanism to Democracy. The results are intelligible only when considered as a popular revolt against every fundamental of modern political practice—an overwhelming revulsion against the lies and the chicane of professional office-seekers.

Study the spiritual allegiance of Americans to-day and it will be seen that it is not given to any figure in active politics, nor to any partisan organization, but to a private citizen who but yesterday was rejected of men. A bed of pain has become the shrine of a country's faith and in the fight to regain surrendered heights, it is to Woodrow Wilson that people look for inspired leadership.

Never a Thought of Self.

Out of our pride in him, our love for him, it would be happiness to talk only of the man to-day, but there is nothing that would please him less. During two years of closest association I never saw him give a thought to personal advantage—I never heard him say a word that had a hint of self. Heart and soul, mind and body, he lived and dreamed America, and we can do him honor only by the same selfless consecration to the ideals for which he dared his life. What this day should be—here in Philadelphia and wherever men and women of like faith gather—is renewed dedication to the redemption of those pledges that are to save the United States, to save the world, to save the future.

The Washington Conference, which was to be a substitute for the League of Nations, which was to meet a people's demand for disarmament, stands exposed to-day as a mean fraud that never at any time had honesty behind it. Merely a change from dreadnaughts to cruisers and auxiliary craft, and even before Italy and France have ratified we see the Navy League resuming its sinister activities and hear Secretary Denby shouting for a "navy second to none."

At every point the Chinese wall theory of national life—smug assumption that America was so sufficient to herself that she could afford to ignore the world's misery—have been exposed in all their suicidal folly. Because Europe is without money or credit with which to buy, America is not able to sell, and at a time when we have more gold than ever before we are compelled to think in terms of wage cuts, half-time and agricultural credits. Because Europe totters on the edge of insolvency, America's own foundations tremble.

Have Paid a Bitter Price.

It is a bitter price to pay for 1920's orgy or negation, but the lesson is worth it. We have seen how disastrous it is to elect a President merely because he is against everything and for nothing. We are rid at last of such outworn superstitions as "America's detached and distant situation" and "splendid isolation," for hammers of tragedy have driven home the truth that the modern world is an interdependent world, and that the very fate of civilization rests upon united action with respect to certain vital human problems. One half of the world cannot sink to ruin without dragging down the other half. Disarmament is not in the power of any group of nations, but must be the action of all nations. Machinery for the prevention of war cannot be built and operated by any exclusive pact, but must be created and controlled by world concert—that alone and only that.

Of all those Senators who fought the League of Nations William E. Borah was the only one that ever deserved credit for honesty and sincerity. To-day this self-same Senator Borah, with the bandages of an ignorant provincialism stripped from his eyes at last, is asking for an economic conference of the nations of the world—the thing of all things for which the League stands. Even the Administration itself shows signs of change, for, while there is much absurdity and humiliation in this business of "unofficial observers"—pussyfooting peeping at keyholes and looking through transoms—it is an evidence, at least, that Washington finally admits the existence of Europe and the fact that there is a League of Nations.

It is indeed a miracle of changed conditions. Two years ago defeated and despised and to-day gathering for the assault that is to give us victory.

Must Fix Responsibility.

Mr. Creel insisted that "responsibility must be fixed for the tragedy of repudiation, not for the purpose of mean recrimination, but so that traitors may be branded and banished, so that people may see the evil consequences of a blind, unquestioning partisanship." It must be borne in mind, he went on, that the League of Nations is "no mere personal conception of Woodrow Wilson's." On the contrary, he stated, it was the solemn pledge of America to her Allies and to the world, and the record on that point is exceptionally clear. "Trade imperialism, rather than a defense of democracy, was the underlying cause of the war and this condition pertained even at the time of America's entry" he explained.

But the disclosures of the German aims and ambitions, Mr. Creel stated, "turned the war into a defense of liberty and democracy, with civiliza-

BUS LINE TO EAST BERLIN

ASKED BY PRESIDENT OF THE EAST BERLIN RAILROAD.

Passengers to Go and Come by Bus and Railroad to be a Freight Line if Plans Are Approved.

The Public Service Commission at Harrisburg on Thursday of last week heard the application of U. L. Gladfelter of East Berlin, for permission to operate as a common carrier between East Berlin, Hanover, and York. At the hearing the troubles of the East Berlin Railroad were detailed.

Gladfelter is a shirt manufacturer with factories at East Berlin, Abbottstown and Winchester, Va. He is also president of the East Berlin Railroad and has occupied that office since the road was reorganized in 1916. While the application was made by Gladfelter personally, the railroad officials explained it is planned to form a company of railroad stockholders who will take over the proposed bus line.

Gladfelter testified the railroad must have relief or go into bankruptcy. Ninety per cent of the income is derived from carload freight shipments. It is proposed to abandon passenger, express and small freight shipments and reduce the number of trains from twelve a week to three. Patrons of the road will be served by the new bus line which will operate from East Berlin, south to Abbottstown, and Hanover, while a branch line is proposed into York to accommodate Abbottstown and East Berlin merchants who buy most of their goods there. At present connections are made with the Western Maryland Railway at Berlin Junction on the East Berlin Railroad, but Gladfelter alleged Western Maryland trains are so far behind schedule that it may take as much as three or four hours to make the short trip by rail.

J. M. Danner, station agent at East Berlin, and general manager of the railroad, gave net income of the East Berlin road as follows: 1916, $250; 1917, $1,130.16; 1918, $470.75; 1919, $624.15; 1920, $623.11; 1921, $520.32. Largely because of the high price of coal, he said, the railroad will lose at least $2,000 this year. No dividends have been paid at any time, he added and in addition the president, secretary, treasurer, and general counsel, of the road serve without pay. The stock is owned by citizens of the communities through which the road passes.

Among other witnesses called were William P. Baker, cashier of the People's State Bank of East Berlin, and secretary of the railroad; Dr. Eugene Elgin, of East Berlin, member of the legislature from Adams county; Dr. Edgar Miller, of East Berlin; Rev. Charles Baker and P. C. Smith, president of the East Berlin National Bank. The minister testified it takes him three days with present railroad facilities to make the round trip between Elizabethtown, and at that he added he must make part of the trip on a milk truck.

Walter Melhorn, who now operates a line of auto busses between York and Gettysburg, opposed the application.

Several years ago the East Berlin Railroad was ordered by the Public Service Commission to continue operating. By the new plan, it is hoped to put the road on a paying business. Deliveries of freight from the Western Maryland to the East Berlin Railroad are made three times a week and on these days trains would operate on the short line.

When Dr. Hagen reached Milan he learned that his aged father, N. K. Hagen, had died while his son was on his way west. A double funeral of father and daughter was held on Dec. 18. Dr. Hagen's father, who was 82 years old, died from the infirmities of age. He came to this country from Norway in 1863 and was one of the pioneer settlers in that part of Minnesota. The Lutheran congregation of Milan was founded at his home. Surviving him are his wife and seven sons and daughters. Dr. Hagen returned home this week.

SUPERVISORS IN MEETING

ADOPT A NUMBER OF RESOLUTIONS AND ELECT OFFICERS.

Legislature Asked to Pay Township All Back Road Bonus—To Reduse All Trucks to Eight Tons.

The Sixth Annual Convention of Road Supervisors and Auditors of Adams County was held in the Photoplay Theatre on Wednesday. The officers of last year were re-elected, Dennis C. Asper, of Aspers, President; Calvin H. Lady and Edwin C. Tyson, First and Second Vice Presidents; P. A. T. Bower, Secretary; and B. F. Longslot, Engineer. C. A. Myers, Conewago township; C. P. Musselman, Hamiltonban township; and Dennis C. Asper, Menallen township, were elected delegates to the State Convention of Road Supervisors to be held in Harrisburg on Feb. 13 next.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolution No. 1. Whereas, insufficient funds have been provided by the Legislatures of the past to provide funds for the State Reward Act, and whereas, many townships throughout this Commonwealth are in need of said funds.

Therefore be it resolved, That we, the members of the Supervisors' Convention assembled at Harrisburg, Pa., September 26th and 27th, 1922, do hereby ask the incoming Legislature and the Governor of Pennsylvania to make an appropriation sufficiently large to cover all the payment of State Reward now in the arrears and also to provide a fund in order to care for applications on State Reward for the years 1923 and 1924.

Resolution No. 2. Whereas, the township division of the State Highway Department has no source of revenue except appropriations made by the State legislature and whereas a source of revenue is highly important in carrying out work of a permanent nature in second class townships.

Therefore, be it resolved: That we, the delegates of this convention convened at Harrisburg, Pa., on September 26 and 27, 1922, urge the General Assembly of the State of Pennsylvania to enact a law where with the portion of State tax derived from sale of gasoline now paid into the General Fund of the State Treasury be paid to the Township Division, State Highway Department, and this share of State tax, together with appropriations made by the Legislature be used in the payments of State Reward.

Resolution No. 3. Whereas, there was presented to the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania during the year 1921, a bill proposing the abolishment of the collection of township taxes by township officials throughout the Commonwealth and providing for the collection of taxes by the county treasurers of the various counties, which in return would place a hardship on the majority of the taxpayers of the townships in placing them to additional expense due to transportation in going to the county seat and the loss of time that would therefore occur:

Therefore be it resolved, That the State Association of Township Supervisors and Commissioners assembled at the first convention of the State capitol building, Harrisburg, Pa., on the 26th and 27th of September, 1922, place ourselves on record as being opposed to any legislation that takes away from the officers of the townships the collection of the township tax, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to each county association of township supervisors and commissioners.

Resolution No. 4. Be it resolved, That we, the elected delegates of this convention assembled, recommend our incoming Legislature to enact a law compelling land and property owners in this Commonwelth to remove all weeds and brush along all public roads and highways within this Commonwealth.

Resolution No. 5. Resolved, That all State aid roads now in existence be maintained by the State Highway Department and the respective county wherein the same highway is situated and that we recommend our future Legislatures to enact laws accordingly.

Resolution No. 6. Be it resolved, That the total maximum legal weight of trucks using the public highways be reduced from 13 tons as now allowed by law, to not to exceed 8 tons, and that we request our State Senator and Representative to support legislation to make this reduction.

Local Warehouse Has New Owner.

—Miss Gertrude Doersom has returned to Charlottesville, Va., after a visit with her sister, Miss Anna Doersom, Baltimore street.

INCOME TAX RETURNS.

May Be Filed Between January 2nd and March 15th, 1923.

Income tax returns are again due. These returns may be filed after January 2, and must be in before March 15. Practically no change has been made in the income tax law within the past year, the revenue department announces, but there is a slight change in several forms.

Single or married persons not living together on Dec. 31, 1922, who had a net income of $1,000 or over for 1922 must file a return regardless of exemption, it is announced. Married persons living together on Dec. 31, 1922, with a net income of $2,000, including the income of minor children, must file a return regardless of exemption.

All persons having a gross income of $5,000 or more, must file a return regardless of exemption, the department announcement states and declares gross income means the difference between the gross receipts and actual cost of material sold, including inventory. This applies to all corporations, partnerships and fiduciaries in business during 1922.

Returns for the local district may be filed with the collector of internal revenue, Philadelphia, or at the local office. Deputy collectors also will visit the various communities during the month of February.

Town Council Meeting.

The Town Council met on Wednesday evening for the first session of the year, and heard Coleman B. Mark, district engineer of the State Department of Health, as to what could be done with the sewage system and the council were told that the sewage disposal plant is inadequate and the system should be everhauled and added to and extended southward beyond the Bonneauville road.

James B. Aumen, Chief of the Gettysburg Fire Company, made his report for year 1922, that property destroyed by fire in year in Gettysburg was less than $100. That there were 10 alarms, 3 were false, and to one the Fire Company did not report. Of the 15 fires, five were chimney blazes and others minor fires. Credit was given to Walter D. Sterner, fire marshall, for cleaning up a number of fire traps during the year. Mr. Aumen suggested that the decision whether to take fire apparatus out of the borough be left to decision of the fire chief instead of property committee, on account of loss of time to locate the members of this committee. This suggestion was agreed to by Council as also the flat rate of $25 to respond to fires within three miles of the town, and $50 beyond that distance.

Lineman Killed.

While making repairs to a high tension power line of the Hanover Light and Power Company in an alley at the Gettysburg Furniture Company, Charles Noel, of Hanover came in contact with a wire carrying 2300 volts of electricity and was hurled to his death. Mr. Noel had just completed some connections on a cross arm at the top of the pole and was starting to come down when his coat sleeve which was wet from the rain touched another wire and conducted the current to his body. He was knocked from the pole and struck a sharp paling fence. Although Mr. Noel was knocked unconscious and was badly burned about the one arm it is thought that the dreadful injuries to his abdomen caused by the sharp pickets of the fence would have been fatal in themselves. He was rushed to the Warner Hospital but died in a short time. Mr. Noel was 35 years old and leaves a wife and three children. This was the first fatal accident on the electric lines of this company.

Rev. Ralph Baker Patents Invention.

Rev. Ralph W. Baker, of Fairfield, has received notice that an application for a patent on an invention of his has been approved by the Patent Department and the patent will soon be granted. Some months ago Mr. Baker designed a card board display stand to be used in connection with the "Curz-It" Co. The stand is made in such a way that it holds a container and the advertised product is shown with the advertisement. It is, by the way, the only device of its kind that can be made complete out of one piece of cardboard and does not have to be asembled or pasted.

WELL KNOWN BUSINESS MAN

EDW. M. ETZLER PASSES AWAY ORGANIZED NEW OXFORD BANK

Sterling Galt, Prominent Citizen of Emmitsburg, is a Victim of Pneumonia.

Edward M. Etzler, a well known business man of Hanover, died last Saturday after two years illness from hardening of the arteries, aged 72 years, 2 months and 6 days. He was a son of the late George and Julia Wintrode Etzler and was born on the old Etzler homestead along the Carlisle pike. He attended the public schools and when a young man accepted a position as clerk in the hardware store of the late A. N. Michael, Hanover. Later he went to Philadelphia where he clerked in a hardware store for eight years, returning to Hanover where he began his business career as partner with the late David Tanger, the firm being known as the Tanger-Etzler Hardware Company. Retiring from the hardware business he organized the People's Bank of Hanover in 1892, and was elected the first cashier which position he held for a number of years. Following his resignation as cashier he organized the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank of New Oxford and held the position of cashier of this institution for some time. Mr. Etzler also assisted in the organization of the Farmers Bank, of McSherrystown, in 1903, and later the Farmers' State Bank of Hanover, in 1906. He was one of the organizers and held the position of director of the Home Building and Loan Association from its organization in 1897, until one year ago when he retired on account of failing health. Mr. Etzler was twice married, his first wife being Miss Alice Myers, and after her death he was married to Miss Alice Pottorff, who survives with two children by the first marriage, Mrs. John E. Nace, of Hanover, and Mrs. C. F. Birchall, of Lancaster. Funeral was on Tuesday, Jan. 2, with services by Rev. Dr. Geo. W. Nicely, and interment in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Hanover.

Sterling Galt died at his home in Emmitsburg on Thursday evening, Dec. 28, at 10.30, following an illness of about a week, from pneumonia. Mr. Galt was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Matthew W. Galt, of Washington, where he lived until his removal to Emmitsburg, some fifteen years ago. For a number of years he was the proprietor and editor of the Emmitsburg Chronicle, and recently established The Fettle Chemical Company for the manufacture and sale of several medical preparations. Mr. Galt was a man of fine intellectual attainments. He was a member of the State Board of Education, was an active promoter of many local movements for community uplift, and among other things, took active interest in encouraging athletic sports. He will be greatly missed in Emmitsburg as a man always ready with his time and means to assist in any worthy enterprise for the benefit of his home community. He had been in failing health for the past two years, and had been at a Baltimore hospital, several times, for treatment, but for the past six months had apparently been greatly improved, and on the road to full recovery. He is survived by his wife and by one son, Sterling Galt, and one daughter, Miss Virginia Galt. He was about 56 years of age. He was related to Mrs. Margaret Valentine of this place.

Mrs. Gertrude Miller Foose, wife of I. B. Foose, died Friday morning at her home in Harrisburg. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Mrs. R. T. Cury. Services were held Sunday afternoon. Burial was made at Dillsburg. Mrs. Foose was a daughter of Harry Miller, for several years proprietor of the Hotel Gettysburg.

Mrs. Sybilla Stauffer, widow of the late David Stauffer, aged 77 years, 2 months and 10 days, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Shetter, East Berlin, on Thursday, December 28. Death was caused by a paralytic stroke. She is survived by the following children: Mrs. Robert Shetter, of East Berlin; Mrs. Lewis Oberlander, Mrs. John Resser, Miss Margaret Stauffer and George Stauffer, of York; Mrs. John W. Patterson, Mrs. Maurice Reck, Mrs. Roy Sipling, of Hanover, and John Stauffer, of Seven Valleys. Funeral was on Sunday, Dec. 31, with interment in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Hanover.

Mrs. George Sherman, of Westminster, died suddenly after an attack following a chill last Friday morning. Her funeral took place Sunday morning, interment being made at Gettysburg. The surviving husband, Geo. W. Sherman, is a native and former resident of New Oxford, and they were the owners of property on Baltimore street, Gettysburg, for a number of years.

Fatal Accident Near Emmitsburg.

The Emmitsburg Chronicle of last week had the following account of an accident near that place:

W. Steiner Ramsburg, a prominent and well-known farmer of near Utica Mills, was killed and his son, Ira C. Ramsburg, and Rev. and Mrs. Roy E. Hoke, of Birmingham, Ala., were lacerated, bruised and shocked, when an automobile in which they were riding crashed into an electric light pole on the Emmitsburg pike near Mt. St. Mary's College last Friday about noon. Mr. Ramsburg sustained a fractured skull and died instantly. The others were taken to the office of Dr. M. A. Birely, Thurmont, where their injuries were dressed. Later Ira Ramsburg was taken to the Frederick City Hospital where an X-ray was made of an injury to his left leg.

Earlier in the day Mr. Ramsburg and his son drove to Gettysburg in their automobile to meet Rev. and Mrs. Hoke, the latter a daughter of Mr. Ramsburg, who had come from their home in Birmingham to spend the holiday season at the parental home of Mrs. Hoke. They left Gettysburg with Ira Ramsburg and Rev. Hoke on the front seat of the car, the rear seat being occupied by Mr. Ramsburg and Mrs. Hoke. As the car was rounding a sharp curve near Mt. St. Mary's College, one of the rear tires came off and the machine became unmanageable. It skidded, swerved to the left and plunged into the light pole. Mr. Ramsburg, 62 years of age, was thrown forward with great force, his head coming in contact with the pole. His skull was fractured and he died instantly. Ira Ramsburg was lacerated and bruised about the body and left leg; Rev. Hoke was cut about the neck and bruised about the body and severely shocked.

Crabapples and Love

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Hello!" hailed Ben Tompkins, as he slowed his speedy little boat to a stop at Jane Dale's back fence.

"Good morning, Ben," said Jane sedately, from the stepladder where she was standing as she broke off clusters of crabapple blossoms. She might not have known Ben was going after shrimps that morning, but the creek that ran past Ben's orchard followed its course to the bay and touched last of all Jane's land. It was a beautiful day—blue sky, a fresh wind, racing clouds, birds singing and the air was sweet with blossoms.

"Too early for shrimps," she called to the bronzed young man in the boat.

He grinned sheepishly. "I know it—just going to scout around the bay and see how things are coming along—going over to the island to look after my nets and lobster pots. Come along?"

"Not today—I'm busy," she evaded.

His glance sharpened. "Don't pick your blossoms, Jane."

"Why not? They're mine." People did say that Jane Dale was too outspoken. Sometimes Jane (secretly) believed them. "I love the smell—they're so delicately sweet!" She buried her fair face in the pinkish bloom.

"Can't have your blossoms and fruit, too—how about crabapple jelly later?" He eyed her shrewdly.

Jane flirted a careless hand at him. "I will remember the fragrance of the blossoms and do without the jelly," she retorted.

"Humph! Wasn't there some poet chap that said if he had a loaf of bread he'd sell it and buy hyacinths or daffodils, or something foolish? I'll bet that before night he'd be around trying to sell his posies for a bowl of bread and milk—hang it all, Jane, you're laughing!" he ended wrathfully.

"You are so funny, Benjamin!"

"Show's over," he retorted gruffly as he started his engine. "You will find out some day, Jane, that I'm right about several things, such as saving some of your blossoms for the fruit time and not wasting love by playing with it, too long!"

"What will happen if I do—that?" she called, her voice cool and thin and provoking.

"Why," as he bent over the engine and then suddenly straightened up and faced her, "why, some day when you are ready to take love seriously you may find it has become tired of waiting and—gone on!" With a clatter and fuss the little craft leaped forward and disappeared around the bend of the creek.

Jane's voice came to him across the intervening space. "I hate you, Ben Tompkins," and when he heard it the grim smile faded from his face and left him looking very anxious and tired.

Jane descended her ladder deliberately and looked at the spray of crabapple blossoms in her hands. She laid [illegible] and went to the water's edge, where the little tree leaned over, and dipped some of its pink blossoms in the tide. An old flat-bottomed boat was moored there, its rotten painter tied to a round stone on the bank. By standing in the boat Jane could easily reach the other blossoms, and the apples on those lower limbs never amounted to anything, after all. Of course she would never let Ben know that she heeded his advice. She stepped down into the skiff and reached for the branches. The boat moved under her weight and the old line snapped. The ebbing tide snatched at the skiff and swung it into the current and in a moment they were rocking down the creek at an increasing speed. Jane had flopped down into the bottom of the boat. A single oar there might be used as a rudder. Jane was handy about boats. All she could do now was to keep the nose of the old skiff in midstream and hope to see some man or boy along the shore.

No one was in sight. The boys were all at school and the men were busy [illegible] gardens or had gone out on the bay, as Ben Tompkins had done.

Ben Tompkins! If it hadn't been for him this would never have happened. How glad Jane was that she had refused to listen to his tale of love! She had always put him off with a jest or an excuse. He was a tyrant—an unbearable tyrant! Jane grew so indignant musing over Ben's faults that she forgot her peril until suddenly the boat bounded out of the creek and ventured out upon a very green and nasty looking bay.

Over in the southwest the sky was darkening and somewhere thunder growled. Along the horizon lightning flickered intermittently.

Jane detested thunder storms.

The boat floundered around off shore among the choppy waves, and Jane was uncertain whether they would be stranded in the salt grass of the marsh or drowned in the deeper water. She was certain, however, that something terrible was going to happen to her, and among other thoughts came to her many times spent with Ben Tompkins—there wasn't another man in the world she would marry—but never mind that, she was going to drown, anyway—and she hoped her parents—

W-h-h-e-e-e-e-e-e-e! What blessed sound was that? She hallooed as loud as she could.

A faint sound answered her.

"Ben!" she called valiantly.

"Coming!" came the stentorian reply.

In a few moments the sturdy little launch had caught up with the runaway skiff and Ben's strong arms had skillfully transferred Jane to his boat and then he scooped up an armful of drenched crabapple blooms and tossed them around her.

"Let the old skiff go—let her sink," urged Jane.

"Never! I'll tow her home; didn't she chase me most to Bayberry Island with a load of blossoms—"

"Ben!"

"To tell me that after all—

"Ben, dear!"

"All's well," sang Ben joyously, as he leaned toward her, and the gay little launch bore them swiftly back to Jane's garden, where the crabapple tree stood like a pinky-white bridal bell waiting for them.

MELODY CAME AS INTERLUDE

Mocking Bird, Without Solicitation, Contributed Its Services to Afternoon Band Concert.

In a park in a southern city of the United States, where mocking birds delight to congregate, the usual afternoon band concert was well under way, giving pleasure to a large and appreciative audience. Frequently mingled with or even rising above, the strains of the band, arose the melodious calls of the mockers, as if they were fully confident that no instruments could outdo the glory and beauty of the notes which bubbled from their swelling throats so easily and naturally.

A canopy was placed over the heads of the musicians, from the center of which, attached to its lofty staff, floated the Stars and Stripes, outlined against the brilliant blue of a southern sky. During one of the quieter portions of the music, a mocking bird took up his place at the very base of the flag-staff, and sung lustily and continuously as if it had been prearranged that he was to be the soloist of the afternoon.

The leader of the band raised his hand to hush his musicians into silence, and then yielding to a graceful impulse, looked at the matchless singer and raised his hat in salutation with an honest recognition of his superiority. The singer seemed quite satisfied at this, and without waiting for an encore flew off, singing as he went, to a nearby live oak. Then the strains of the band again burst forth, doing the very best they could under the circumstances.

Driven by "Divine Discontent."

Exceptional men in the world of success are said to be urged onward by a "divine discontent."

Hens show it, too. Our record layers are record workers. Highest egg record hens are the first ones searching for feed in the morning and the last to retire to roost. Their every movement is alert, vigorous and snappy. They are never at rest. Where permitted this restlessness carries them far afield in search of egg-making material. This wandering is so incessant as to consume too much energy and egg production is found to be greatest in limited range.

Owners of phenomenal goats will recognize our description of great men and great hens. Sukey Nannie behaves that same way. For such goats limited hours in the pasture will undoubtedly produce the best results.—From the Goat World.

Climax of Carrier Pigeon's Career.

The climax of the pigeon's carrier career was in the seige of Paris in the Franco-Prussian war. Something like 360 birds were sent out and 57 came in with messages before the balloon service was developed. Scientists photographed down 16 folio pages to go into a single pellicle weighing less than one gram, so that a single bird on one trip might carry as many as 5,000 short messages. The Germans trained falcons to follow and kill the French pigeons, and the French had forgotten or did not know that centuries before the Chinese had used whistles and bells on their pigeons to scare off predatory birds. Tradition has it that in Solomon's time betting on the speed of these birds was so common that it had to be checked. The Greeks used to send to all their cities the names of Olympic visitors by homing pigeons.

THE FEMALE STRANGER

VISITORS to the cemetery attached to St. Paul's church in Alexandria, Va., seldom leave without examining the inscription upon a handsome monument which is one of the outstanding places of interest in the city as well as one of the most baffling riddles of identity which the passage of more than a century has failed to solve. This inscription comprises within a few lines all that the world knows of the woman in question, for it reads:

OF THE
FEMALE STRANGER

Whose mortal sufferings terminated on the fourth day of October, 1816, aged twenty-eight years and eight months, this stone is erected by her disconsolate husband in whose arms she breathed out her last sigh, and who, under God, did his utmost to soothe the dull, cold ear of death.

That is all—and the most determined efforts of the residents of Alexandria during the first half of the last century, failed to throw the slightest light upon the mystery.

The facts in the case are few, but, such as they are, they are supported by the unassailable evidence of a number of persons who were eyewitnesses to the brief public appearance of the "female stranger." The brig Four Sons docked at Alexandria on July 25, 1816, en route from Halifax to the West Indies. The Virginia city was not a port of call on the regular route, but the captain stated that one of his passengers had been taken dangerously ill and that her husband had demanded that she be put ashore at Alexandria, where a boat was lowered, and a man and woman, the latter apparently very ill, were taken ashore.

Despite the heat of mid-summer, the woman wore a heavy black veil, and her husband secured the best suite in the Inn of the Bunch of Grapes, as well as the services of a well-known physician whom he engaged only after pledging him to strictest secrecy. Even in the presence of the doctor, however, the woman's face was kept veiled, and the husband steadfastly refused to hire a nurse, saying that he was entirely capable of handling the case and that he was able to do anything that a nurse could do.

As the weeks of scorching hot weather progressed, however, the man began to wilt under the constant strain of watching beside the bed, and finally agreed to permit two of the guests in the Inn to help him—but only after they had taken an oath that nothing they might learn would ever be divulged, an oath which was kept as a sacred trust.

During the ten weeks which followed the woman's arrival in Alexandria, she grew steadily worse, and at last, at dawn on October 4, her husband announced that she had died. Then, for fear that someone might see the face which he had kept hidden from the world, he himself prepared the body for burial, sealed the lid of the coffin, and, after attending the funeral and ordering the headstone with the strange inscription, disappeared.

On October 4 of the following year, Alexandria was surprised at the sudden and unheralded return of the husband, who remained in the city only long enough to place flowers on the grave of the "female stranger," and to see that the plot in the cemetery was well taken care of. Once a year, for twelve years, he returned. Then his visits ceased and the grave was neglected until, a number of years later, a distinguished elderly man and woman came and ordered the monument to be replaced by another and more costly headstone bearing the same inscription, with the addition of the verse:

How loved, how honored once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot:
A heap of dust alone remains of thee,
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be.

They, too, vanished—taking with them the secret of the identity of the woman whose history and personality is forever hidden from the world behind three words "The Female Stranger."

Novel Shooting Feat.

An interesting experiment in freak rifle shooting was described recently by an English officer. "I have fired an ordinary wax candle through four deal boards placed a foot apart," he said. "I used six inches of wax candle and thirty-three grains of powder with the usual wads. The shot was removed by cutting off the top half-inch of the case, and a candle weighing one and a quarter ounces was inserted. I fired at a range of about five yards. Each plank was perforated. There were plenty of pieces of dry wax on all the boards, but the first. When fired against planks placed immediately back to back, the candle went through the first and was brought up by the solid weight of wood of the other three." Major Hardcastle added that a certain gamekeeper won many bets by shooting candles through a spade.

U. S. Leads World in Flying.

During the last twelve months the United States took the lead in practically all phases of aviation, according to a chronology for 1922 issued by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce. American pilots in American made fachines have captured world records held in some instances for many years by Europeans. The Chamber points to the record of the air mail, which has traveled 1,750,000 miles in twelve months, carrying 49,000,000 letters without a fatality to a pilot.

"The year has been characterized by remarkable progress in design, construction and operation," the report says. "Nowhere else has there been such startling improvement. American pilots in American machines have obtained such results as to warrant the assertion that theirs has been the most significant series of achievements in the world history of flight.

"During the year many more world's records came to America. In October Brig. Gen. Wm. Mitchell in an Army-Curtis biplane averaged 224.58 miles an hour over a straight-away course, thereby wresting the record from Sadi Leconte, who a month before had attained an average of 213.575 miles an hour under similar conditions in France.

"In making this record General Mitchell flew the same biplane and same Curtiss motor in which Lieutenant R. L. Maughan of the Army Air Service won the Pulitzer Trophy race, flying 250 kilometers, closed circuit, with fifteen turns, at an average of 205.8 miles an hour. In that race Maughan also broke the international record for 100 and 200 kilometer closed and straight course flying. Six other airplanes had broken the 50 and 100 kilometer records in the same race before Maughan's remarkable performance. All the planes were American with American motors.

Other Safety Creations.

"Many other devices were created to make the airplane easier and safer to operate, among them the lateral 'pressure equalizer,' which Grover Loening installed on his monoplane flying yachts. The development of the reversible propeller, the supercharger and the Gallaudet geared propeller mechanism is being carried on in the United States at various laboratories and factries.

"The world's altitude record, made by Lieut. J. A. Macready in 1921 and which was made possible by the super-charger developed by the Army Air Service at McCook Field, has not been surpassed. Parachutes, known as aerial life preservers, have become dependable. While many civilians have contributed much to parachute development, the long jumps have been made by army aviators. Last June Captain A. W. Stevens broke the official record by dropping 24,206 feet over McCook Field.

"On April 17, Clifford Webster in a Loening air yacht flew with a passenger from Palm Beach, Fla., to New York between daylight and dark. His flying time was 9 hours and 56 minutes for the 1,220 miles, which he covered with one stop for fuel. Another worldd's record was made by army pilots in September, when Lieutenants Oakley Kelly and J. A. Macready flew 2,060 miles between San Diego, Cal., and Indianapolis, Ind., without stopping. A few days previously they had made another record duration flight, remaining in the air 35 hours, 18 minutes and 30 seconds, in the same plane, and Army-Fokker T-2 monoplane with Liberty motor.

Richard Lloyd Jones Says — America Needs Reminders

e hundred years after a group of wise and brave meeting in Independence Hall created for the an boy the glorious holiday, the Fourth of we celebrated the birth of this nation in a great nial exposition in Philadelphia. The good peoe this city of brotherly love now propose with ndable patriotic enthusiasm that the nation nd hold another great American exposition in ame city in 1926 to record the progress, and in the triumphs, of this nation in its century a half of matchless life.

's a fine idea. We need reminders. We have few holidays to remind us of the lofty ideals of builders of this nation. And the too few we are accepted as merely a release from labor. lead too few of us to the patriotic shrine. In individual quest for gain we too often lose sight he common aim which is the common gain. In earch for individual wealth we too often forget OMMONWEALTH. That was a great word 76. It is a word shunned as socialistic by the ious today.

need reminders that we may not lose out of ca that which is America. We have been a us and hospitable people. We have opened our and welcomed the European malcontent—he was persecuted by foreign crowns. We have welcome the covetous who came to get from us t to give. We have made welcome the foreigni who had no idea of becoming American- who took advantage of our hospitality and o "do us" rather than to do with us.

need reminders lest we forget and forgetting, ay.

demnation of the government is not left to the "Reds" alone. Nor is it solely the socialist's obsession. Both major parties play checkers on the board of government in Congress. They maneuver for party advantage forgetting to plead for principle divorced from party consideration.

The farmer finds fault with the government. The laborer finds fault with the government. We find fault with ourselves. We are the government.

The immigrant talks in the fatherland tongue, reads the fatherland press, thinks in fatherland loyalty and hopes to return with American money to live on fatherland soil. Irving Bacheller recently reminded us that the big outstanding fact about America was that "to save from the domination of men whose god was in their bellies our fathers made bloody footprints in the snow."

We need reminders, lest we ourselves kill the very thing that was born on the Fourth of July in '76. How much we need it is eloquently told in a recent issue of "Life," a humorous magazine which treats this serious subject in a close to serious way when it editorially asks: "Who Killed the Last American?" and answers thus:

"I," said the Budget. "I did it with my financial wheedle. I killed the Last American."

"I killed him," said Bolshevism. "I killed the last American. I permeated his social structure with my virus; I did it with my little Trotsky."

"I was the one who killed the Last American," said Immigration. "With my hordes I overcame him; I overwhelmed him utterly and completely—I, with my steamship graft!"

And all the bells tolled for the Last American, who gasped to himself and groaned with his dying breath: "'Twas I who did it! I let myself be killed. And all because I didn't know how to save myself!"

tion, humanity and international law among the chief attributes at stake. But with the end of the war partisanship was revived and Republican orators 'burst forth in wholesale repudiation of the fourteen points.'"

Wilson Betrayed at Home.

Mr. Creel described the howls that went up from Republican partisans even as Mr. Wilson boarded ship for France. He referred particularly to outbursts from the late Colonel Roosevelt and Senator Lodge. These declarations from Republicans were taken up in Europe and caused some of the Allied statesmen to repudiate the Wilson ideals and shout for a peace based on the old principles of combinations of powers.

Not in all history is there record of a more pathetic figure than that of Woodrow Wilson in that black hour—betrayed at home, ambushed abroad, ringed about by foes and deserted by a world returned to its selfish preoccupations. Nor is there anything more shameful than the smug, cocksure certitudes that have been circulated until they have the value of impartial judgments. Who has not heard them? Why didn't he appeal to the people?" "Why didn't he put his foot down?" "Why didn't he rise in his wrath, denounce the traitors and take ship for home?"

In the midst of this confusion Mr. Creel stated, Mr. Wilson surveyed the situation and decided to remain in France and fight for the ideals to which America had consecrated herself. And in the face of odds, Creel stated, Mr. Wilson emerged victorious, despite the common impression that he met with setbacks at the hands of European diplomats.

More Confusion to Set Straight.

In refuting charges that Mr. Wilson accepted no suggestions Creel stated:

There is one more confusion to set straight. It has to do with the charge that the defeat of the League of Nations was not due to Senate treachery, but entirely to the stubbornness of the President in refusing to accept reasonable reservations. This is a lie, and people must be made to understand it is a lie. There was never a time when Woodrow Wilson was not willing to accept any reservation which did not impair validity or compromise integrity.

When he returned from Paris in March, 1919, he laid the first draft of the covenant before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and invited suggestion, criticism and comment. Leaders of public thought were likewise provided with copies and ex-President Taft submitted four amendments. Judge Charles E. Hughes seven and Senator Elihu Root presented six. All save one were incorporated in the revised draft.

Never Refused Suggestions.

In July, when the President gave the completed treaty to the Senate, he placed himself at the disposal of the Committee on Foreign Relations. Throughout the conferences, and repeatedly thereafter, he assured the Senate that it was perfectly legitimate to interpret the articles, for, while he was convinced that their meaning was clear, it was their right to make the obvious still more obvious. He had no objection whatsoever to reservations explaining our constitutional method, declaring that Congress alone can declare war or determine the use of the armed forces of the United States on land or on the sea. If they could make clearer the intention to reserve the Monroe Doctrine he would be glad to have them do it. If they could find any more explicit words to exempt our domestic affairs from the operation of the League, he would welcome them. If they wanted to state that each nation should be the judge as to when its international obligations had been fulfilled, well and good.

Of the 160 reservations and amendments offered only two met with the President's steadfast opposition—the Lodge knife thrust, which made our membership in the League a farce, and the Johnson amendment that denied voting rights to Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and India, even while claiming votes for Panama, Cuba, Haiti, Liberia and America's other political and commercial dependencies.

It is as criminal as absurd to say or think that there was anything that Woodrow Wilson did or did not do—anything he said or did not say—that had power to change the result in any way. As early as March, 1919, 37 Republican Senators signed a round-robin declaring unalterable hostility to the League of Nations, and these Republicans were supported by Democratic Senators even more fanatical in their opposition. So stands the record. Let us see that it is written in letters of fire on the wall of the world.

Miss Dillman Tells Her Experience.

The following brief account of an interview with a Gettysburg woman five years ago, and its sequel, will be read with keen interest by every citizen.

Miss Mary Dillman, 263 S. Washington St., Gettysburg, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are, in my opinion, a very fine remedy for weak kidneys. My back was very weak and hurt me all the time. Backache bore down on me as if I had a great weight on my back. My kidneys were too frequent in action and when I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills I purchased some at the People's Drug Store. This remedy gave me fine relief and has never since failed to benefit me when it was necessary to use them."

The above statement was given February 15, 1916, and on April 11, 1921, Miss Dillman said: "Nothing could ever make me go back on Doan's Kidney Pills. This very fine kidney medicine drove all symptoms of kidney trouble from me. Every once in a while I take a few of Doan's to be sure my kidneys are still in good shape."
